(6) GERMAN FILMS IN SPAIN, 2010-17: AN ANALYSIS

The Spanish economy as a whole may still be a little unsteady but the film distribution business seems to have settled down again after the many predictions of a final crisis in 2013-14. Indeed, one of that crisis's loudest doomsayers, veteran distributor Golem, opened four new German films in 2017, including TONI ERDMANN. Maren Ade's film sold just short of 100,000 tickets - not nearly as many as in, say, France, but enough to earn it 16th place among the 109 German films and majority co-productions released in Spain between 2010 and 2017.

Admissions for the year were above 100 million - admittedly by a mere 200,000 - for only the third time since 2010, although this fell slightly short of the total for 2016, as did box office, ending the steady climb back after the dreadful figures for 2013. But other key markers crept slowly upwards in 2017: number of screens (by 1.9%), number of films released (up by 9%) and average ticket price (up by 1.7%)

The comparison with France as referenced above is significant, however. As the genre charts for Spain show, German stories was by far the biggest category in terms of films released - almost half (51 out of 109) - but accounted for less than 10% of annual admissions. Arthouse movies, on the other hand - boosted by DAS WEISSE BAND, SOUL KITCHEN, HANNAH ARENDT and TONI ERDMANN - seemed to have rediscovered their niche with Spanish audiences, with 16 films (15% of releases) selling 16% of the tickets - just under 1 million over the eight years - averaging 56,000 per film. These were films that brought with them a hint of glamour from a festival launch (most debuted in Cannes or Berlin). But the viability of mid-range 'stories', noted in France, seems to have been a victim of the 2013 crash and to have evaporated in Spain.

This is significant for German producers and their sales agents since Spain was, in the 2000s, a regular outlet for German films, crossover as well as arthouse. The number of German releases has held quite steady over the eight years surveyed, but they have made limited impact on the Spanish box office. Indeed, in only one year of the seven - 2011, which saw the release of THE THREE MUSKETEERS and A DANGEROUS METHOD selling over 833,000 tickets between them. At the other end of the scale, only 14 German films and majority co-productions sold over 100,000 tickets in the period surveyed, while 49 - most of them 'German stories' - managed 10,000 admissions or less.

But, despite the economic conditions, the web is still spread wider for German films in Spain than in most other major European countries (with the exception of France), suggesting that arthouse channels are still open, albeit not flowing as freely as they once did.

The distributors who acquired the most films from 2010-17 were boutique label Flins & Piniculas (18 titles); Golem Distribución (13); Karma Films (11); and Paycom Multimedia (eight). Acquisitions as a whole were not restricted to Cannes and Berlin, with pick-ups made through regular contact or at smaller festivals or commercial events like the American Film Market. In this respect at least, the Spanish distribution business remains on its traditional track. And the cultural profile of German films remains relatively high in Spain, even if the economic prospects for their producers (and distributors) are more modest than they were.

What works in Spain? 'International' films originally made in English (although likely to have been shown dubbed); children's movies which, again, are animated and/or dubbed: and arthouse movies from the higher end of the budget spectrum.

What doesn't work in Spain? The kind of mid-range German dramas that used to play well there, are still regularly acquired by Spanish distributors but yield meagre returns.

What else might appeal? The lesson from the respective admissions figures for the German stories that did or did not work at the Spanish box office is that thrillers with contemporary resonance are a good bet: in that category, IM LABYRINTH DES SCHWEIGENS and DER STAAT GEGEN FRITZ BAUER both sold more than 50,000 tickets.

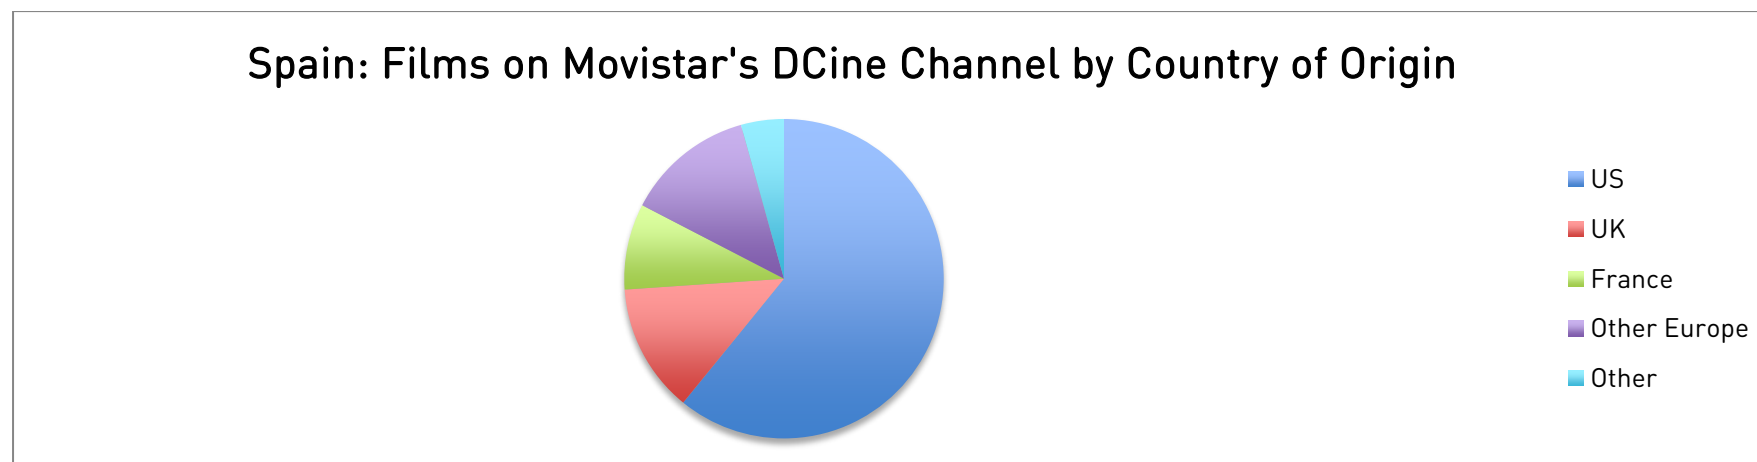

[7] GERMAN FILMS IN SPAIN, 2010-17: TV AND VOD

Spanish television is as diversified as any in Europe, with a wide range of channels covering the usual spectrum, from news and family viewing to movies and sport (with the latter list including channels dedicated to football giants Real Madrid and Barcelona). The first chart below indicates the breakdown of channels available by cable, satellite and IPTV delivery from cable-and-satellite giant Movistar+.

The second chart shows the nationality of titles available on DCine. Available in the Movistar+ package, DCine is a partially curated 24-hour-a-day movie channel showing recent independent US movies, some older films, one or two blockbusters and a smattering of films from elsewhere in Europe. Its pitch is 'box-office hits in a place where classic cinema never dies'.

One German film was programmed over the period surveyed: the 1984 children's adventure story DIE UNENDLICHE GESCHICHTE.

For details of on-line VOD platforms available in Spain, see the appropriate appendix.

Of the distributors listed in Section (4) above who handled five or more German films and/or majority co-productions, several have their own VOD platforms or have deals with existing ones:

- titles handled theatrically by Flins y Piniculas have been released on Vimeo and the company has also licensed some of its library to SensaCine;
- some titles handled by PayCom Multimedia and Surtsey Films are available on YouTube.
